

Argentine Tango with George and Jairelbhi Furlong

Born to an Argentinean family, Tango was a presence in George's life since his early childhood. Thanks to a highly musical family, he started his musical training at age 10 and continued through high school and college. A native of Caracas, Venezuela, Jairelbhi began her dance training at age 9, joining Las Voces Blancas, one of the top dance schools for children in the country. Because of her graceful movements and perseverance, she became part of the school's dance troupe, making television performances and traveling frequently.

George and Jairelbhi's teaching focuses on connection, technique and elegance of the dance. Their attention to details and ability to communicate provide the student a rich learning environment. Also recognized for their musicality, George and Jairelbhi Furlong have performed and taught in cities throughout the United States, Guatemala, as well as in Buenos Aires (Argentina), and are seen as one of the most promising Argentine Tango couples of their generation. They have performed with the Fort Worth Symphony, the San Francisco Symphony, Lisandro Adrover's Opus Cuatro, and with bandonists Horacio Romo and Daniel Binelli. They toured the USA in 2007 as part of the cast of 'Tango Buenos', and Mexico in 2008 with the Hugo Patyn Dance Company. Often invited to be part of the most renowned Tango festivals in the United States, George and Jairelbhi created 'Evolutiontango' in 2005, a dance group based in Dallas, Texas, and have produced, directed, and choreographed 'Tango: Now and Then,' and 'Evolutiontango,' among several other shows. For the Past year George and Jairelbhi have been part of Fernanda Ghi and Guillermo Merlo production "This is Tango Now." In 2012 they will continue to be part of this production touring throughout the United States.
